Contents

Volume 5, Number 1, March 1984

Symposium: Endorphinergic mechanisms in food, salt and water intake.
Guest co-editors: S. J. COOPER and D. J. SANGER

Endorphinergic mechanisms in food, salt and water intake: an overview.
S. J. COOPER and D. J. SANGER 1–6

Kappa opioid agonists and antagonists: effects on drinking and urinary output.
J. D. LEANDER 7–14

Drinking behavior is modulated by CNS administration of opioids in the rat.
D. A. CZECH, M. J. BLAKE and E. A. STEIN 15–24

Ventromedial and lateral hypothalamic injections of naloxone or naltrexone suppress the acute food intake of food-deprived rats.
J. A. THORNHILL and W. SAUNDERS 25–30

Drinking: a final common pathway?
K. M. WILSON, N. ROWLAND and M. J. FREGLY 31–38

The effect of naloxone on schedule-induced and other drinking.
M. WALLACE, G. WILLIS and G. SINGER. 39–44

Dual action of nalaxone on feeding revealed by behavioural analysis: separate effects on initiation and termination of eating.
T. C. KIRKHAM and J. E. BLUNDELL 45–52

Stress, endogenous opioids and salt intake.
C. C. KUTA, H. U. BRYANT, J. E. ZABIK and G. K. W. YIM 53–60

Which opioid receptor mechanism modulates feeding?
J. E. MORLEY, A. S. LEVINE, B. A. GOSNELL and C. J. BILLINGTON 61–68

Book reviews. 69–71
J. S. Garrow, Treat obesity seriously (L. A. Leiter)
M. R. C. Greenwood (Ed.), Obesity. Contemporary issues in clinical nutrition (L. A. Leiter)
Ross Laboratories, Understanding anorexia nervosa and bulimia (M. Fichter)

Volume 5, Number 2, June 1984

Contributions of obesity, gender, hunger, food preference, and body size to bite size, bite speed, and rate of eating.
S. W. HILL and N. B. McCUTCHEON 73–83

Deprivation, palatability and the micro-structure of meals in human subjects.
F. BELLISLE, F. LUCAS, R. AMRANI and J. LE MAGNEN . . . 85–94

Weight change and psychological state in obese women.
V. E. WEIGHILL and D. BUGLASS 95–102

Sweetness intensity perception and sweetness pleasantness in women varying in reported restraint of eating.
J. E. R. FRIJTERS 103–108

Time of day influences food acceptability.
L. L. BIRCH, J. BILLMAN and S. S. RICHARDS 109–116

Acculturation to Canadian foods by Chinese immigrant boys: changes in the perceived flavour, health value and prestige of foods.
N. HRBOTICKY and M. KRONDL 117–126

Hepatic control of food intake.
H. S. KOOPMANS 127–131

Reply to Koopmans' hepatic control of food intake.
M. RUSSEK and R. RACOTTA 133–135

Effects of continuous long-term intravenous infusion of long-chain fatty acids on feeding behaviour and blood components of adult sheep.
F. VANDERMEERSCHEN-DOIZE and R. PAQUAY 137–146

Meal initiation controlled by learned cues: basic behavioural properties.
H. P. WEINGARTEN 147–158

Ingestive behaviour in the homeostatic control of internal environment.
J. LE MAGNEN 159–167

Book reviews 169–172
P. L. Darby, P. E. Garfinkel, D. M. Garner and D. V. Coscina (Eds.), Anorexia nervosa: developments in research (K. M. Pirke)

Recent publications 173

Calendar of events 174

Volume 5, Number 3, September 1984

Evaluation of milk and nutrient intakes of school children in Nigeria.
D. O. NNANYELUGO 175–185

Preference and sensitivity to salt taste as determinants of salt intake.
R. SHEPHERD, C. A. FARLEIGH and D. G. LAND 187–197

The use and the attributions of some sweet foods.
R. PRÄTTÄLÄ and M. KEINONEN 199–207

The effects of moderate protein or energy supplements on subsequent nutrient intake in man.
L. STOCKLEY, F. A. JONES and A. J. BROADHURST 209–219

Isohedonic tastes support a two-dimensional hypothesis of palatability.
K. C. BERRIDGE and H. J. GRILL 221–231

Vasopressin effects on food-rewarded learning tasks might be due to its action on carbohydrate/lipid metabolism, not memory.
A. F. CRINE 233–238

A role for amine accumulation in the syndrome of ingestive deficits following lateral hypothalmic lesions.
G. L. WILLIS and G. C. SMITH 239–262

Aphagia and adipsia after serial bilateral-6-OHDA lesions: a reply to G. L. Willis and G. C. Smith.
S. B. DUNNETT and A. B. BJÖRKLUND 263–265

Comment on effects of nigrostriatal dopamine lesions.
E. M. STRICKER and M. J. ZIGMOND 266–267

Feeding behavior after hypothalmic 6-hydroxydopamine injections.
S. F. LEIBOWITZ 268–271

We should de-emphasize the importance of the role we give amines in the LH syndrome.
I. Q. WHISHAW and B. KOLB 272–276

A role for amine accumulation in the syndrome of ingestive deficits following lateral hypothalmic lesions—reply to the commentators.
G. L. WILLIS and G. C. SMITH 277–279

Calendar of events 280

Volume 5, Number 4, December 1984

The relationship between salt intake and preferences for different salt levels in soup.
R. SHEPHERD, C. A. FARLEIGH and D. G. LAND 281–290

Acceptance of sweet and salty tastes in 2-year-old children.
G. K. BEAUCHAMP and M. MORAN 291–305

Anticipatory salivary flow to the sight of different foods.
C. M. CHRISTENSEN and M. NAVAZESH 307–315

Dietary intake of sweet foods and of dairy fats and resultant gustatory responses to sugar in lemonade and to fat in milk.
R. M. PANGBORN and M. E. GIOVANNI 317–327

Plasma immunoreactive beta-endorphin response to glucose ingestion in human obesity.
C. J. GETTO, D. T. FULLERTON and I. H. CARLSON 329–335

Pleasantness changes and food intake in a varied four-course meal.
B. J. ROLLS, P. M. VAN DUIJVENVOORDE and E. T. ROLLS . . 337–348

Effects of information about specific nutrient content on ratings of "goodness" and "pleasantness" of common foods.
J. R. EISER, C. EISER, D. J. PATTERSON and C. M. HARDING . 349–359

Hunger and palatability: tracking ratings of subjective experience before, during and after the consumption of preferred and less preferred food.
A. J. HILL, L. D. MAGSON and J. E. BLUNDELL 361–371

Book reviews 373–377
